

High-quality Development of Think Tanks with Chinese Characteristics: Problems and Suggestions

Yang Yaqin

Abstract

Nowadays think tanks in China largely face the problems of “pace” and “adaptation” . Typically, vision, capacity and idea of think tank research can hardly meet the policy-making demand. Also, management, expression and evaluation systems can rarely adapt to the functions of think tanks. This research suggests that, in order to promote the high-quality development of think tanks with Chinese characteristics, the emphases should be on the constructions of the institutional environment, the innovation ability, the “opening-up” concept, and the international collaborations.
